Tongue-tie can be a distressing condition for children and can interfere with speech development. This study describes a novel tongue-tie release surgery in children. This study included 30 patients (15 females, 15 males) aged between 5 and 60 months. Swallow and tongue photography was used to record growth and pre- and postoperative growth of lingual frenulum in this study group. Swallow recordings were performed using the validated 'Swallow Assessment Tool (SAT)' to identify growth in patients. The 'Tongue Size Measurement Tool (TSMT)' was used to measure lingual frenulum and the 'Tongue Tongue Tie Quality/Nose Airway Score (TTTQ/NAS)' to evaluate postoperative improvements. The procedure was performed for each patient under general anaesthesia with mild sedation. The procedure was completed in a single stage and within an average time of 15 min. Anatomical healing of the tongue-tie was observed in all of the patients after surgery. Swallow assessment was performed preoperatively and was repeated 2 weeks postoperatively. One patient had recurrence of the tongue-tie. The mean rate of growth of the lingual frenulum observed in this study was 3.6 mm/week (range: 3.1-4.7 mm/week). The mean size of the tongue measured using the TSMT was 3.2 mm preoperatively and 3.9 mm postoperatively. The mean time of onset of healing was 3.2 weeks (range: 2.5-4.5 weeks). In conclusion, tongue-tie release and primary repair are a simple, safe and time-saving procedure for children with tongue-tie. This procedure does not hinder the natural growth of the tongue.// //
